

Formal Grievance - Evidence of Malicious Intent, Constructive Dismissal, and Hostile Work Environment by [Mary-Ann Jones]

1 message

Wilbur William Matthee <wilburmat@gmail.com>
To: Wilbur Matthee <wilbur.matthee@medscheme.co.za>

Sun, 02 Nov 2025 at 17:21

Dear HR Department,

I am writing to lodge an urgent formal grievance against my team leader, Mary-Ann Jones. A review of the attached transcript from 31 October 2025 reveals a calculated pattern of behavior designed to undermine, isolate, and provoke me, creating an intolerable work environment with the apparent intent of forcing my resignation.

This is not a simple personality conflict. The evidence points to malicious intent and a strategic effort to build a false case against me.

Evidence of Malicious and Bad-Faith Conduct:

1. Strategic Entrapment and "Double Binds":
 - My team leader creates no-win situations. When I show initiative (e.g., the CNBR referral), I am accused of "undermining" her and operating in secrecy, even when I proactively correct the oversight. When I seek clarity from peers on a sudden, unilateral change to my work arrangement, I am accused of "creating noise" and failing to "respect authority." This is a deliberate tactic to ensure I am always in the wrong.
2. Systematic Gaslighting:
 - She directly denies factual reality. In the transcript, I state I informed her of the CNBR issue via a follow-up email, which she explicitly denies ("No, you didn't"). This is a clear attempt to destabilize my perception of events and erode my confidence.
3. Weaponizing Past Resolved Issues:
 - She inappropriately and maliciously referenced a past, resolved grievance I lodged, using it to suggest a pattern of behavior on my part which she can do to now by opening a case of harassment against me. This is an obvious attempt to pre-emptively discredit me and intimidate me from raising current valid concerns.
4. Orchestrated Provocation and Narrative Building:
 - The sudden, out-of-hours demand to return to the office—issued only to me, contrary to agreed-upon plans—appears designed to provoke a reaction. My reasonable efforts to understand this directive were then used as the "evidence" to support her accusations of insubordination. She is actively manufacturing incidents to support a false narrative.
5. Overt Campaign for My Removal:
 - She repeatedly and unprompted suggested I "ask Mapule to be removed from the team," stating our dynamic is "unhealthy" and that she "cannot continue." Given that she is the source of the conflict, these statements are not constructive but are a clear indication of her desired outcome: my removal from her team, by any means necessary.

Conclusion and Urgent Request:

The cumulative effect of these actions is a textbook hostile work environment. The pattern of entrapment, gaslighting, and provocation indicates bad faith and malicious intent that goes far beyond poor management. I am experiencing significant stress and anxiety, and I have a genuine fear that my position is being deliberately made untenable to facilitate a constructive dismissal.

I therefore demand that HR:

1. Launch an immediate and formal investigation into the conduct of Mary-Ann Jones, focusing on the patterns of malicious behavior and intent outlined above.
2. Take immediate interim measures to remove me from her direct authority pending the outcome of the investigation.
3. Provide me with a written guarantee against any form of retaliation.
4. Confirm in writing that the unilateral change to my work arrangement is suspended until a full and fair consultation is conducted.

This situation is critical. I have attached the transcript as evidence and am prepared to provide all further documentation. I expect your immediate response to arrange a meeting.

Sincerely,

2 attachments

will oi.docx

28 KB

new thing will.pdf

86 KB